	Every civilized nation of the world has its own legislation which protects the consumers. The word 'consumer' has been defined in terms of 'goods' and services'. Those who buy goods or avail service are consumers. In view of this everyone in the society is consumer whether he may be a bureaucrat, politician, officer, professor, doctors, engineers, employer or employee, farmer, labour, student, etc. The words trader and consumer have its relevance since the date of civilization. So protection of interest of consumers has been a matter of concern from the olden times and what we find today is not a product of a day or a year but has been a matter of constant process. In the beginning consumer cases were covered general law.
