The administration of justice by the state must be regarded as a permanent and essential element of civilization and as a device that admits of no substitute. Men being what they are their conflicting interests, real or apparent draw them in diverse ways and their position from them to the maintenance of these interests by all methods possible notably by that method of private force to which the public force is the only adequate reply.

- (b) Translate the following passage into Gujarati : 10

The term negligence has two uses. For it signifies a particular state of mind and at times conduct resulting therefrom. In the former, negligence is opposed to wrongful intention and in latter it is opposed not to wrongful intention but to intentional wrong doing. A similar double signification is observable in the word “cruelty” subjectively, it means a certain disposition and objectively it means conduct resulting from it. The ambiguity can scarcely lead to any confusion.
